

Third International Conference on Health and Biodiversity

Galway City, Ireland
14th to 17th September 2026

Information note for participants

v1.3, 18th August 2026

1 About the Venue

Galway

Galway is the capital city of the West of Ireland, in the province of Connacht. A vibrant, friendly and colourful city, recognised worldwide for its welcoming atmosphere, historic streetscapes, beautiful coastal views and thriving arts and cultural scene. It is also a rather small city, and it is possible to walk from one side of the city area in the east to the other in the west in little more than an hour. The charming and lively character of Galway's streets, shopping and nightlife make it one of Ireland's most popular destinations for families and lovers of nature and culture. The City is home to the University of Galway, part of the National University of Ireland and one of Europe's leading universities studying the social, cultural, and economic dimensions of biodiversity.

Galway Bay forms part of several designated nature conservation areas, protected under international agreements (including the Ramsar Convention on Wetlands), European Union directives and national legislation. The rich complex of habitats within and around Galway Bay have supported communities and livelihoods for millennia and are an intrinsic part of the region's rich maritime heritage. To the north of Galway City, the River Corrib and Lough Corrib and their associated canals and tributaries support ecologically important fisheries, whilst to the west and north west Connemara National Park supports a mosaic of montane, grassland, wetland, woodland, limestone pavement and aquatic habitats, and thousands of sites of archaeological importance which bear witness to the intimate relationships between people and landscape in this region dating back to the Neolithic period.

Galway also sits within Ireland's Wild Atlantic Way, one of the longest defined coastal scenic routes in the world, running more than 2,500km along Ireland's west coast, making Galway a perfect base for exploring the culture, nature and history of Ireland's Atlantic coast.

Conference Venue

Cohab3 will be held at the Galmont Hotel and Spa to the east of Galway City centre. It is a 4-star luxury hotel on the shore of Lough Atalia, part of the Galway Bay Complex Special Area of Conservation, Special Protection Area and Ramsar Site. The conference venue has excellent meeting facilities and our working and refreshment areas will have excellent views over the Lough.

The venue has a large underground car park, and is a few minutes' walk from the main bus station, private coach station and train station. It is also an excellent location for exploring the entire city, its wonderful restaurants, shops and pubs on foot.

2 Accommodation

Participants are responsible for making their own reservations. The Cohab team has selected a number of hotels with which we have a working relationship, listed in the table below, along with discount codes. All are within a comfortable walking distance of the main venue. All information regarding arrival, departure, cancellations, or any other changes should be communicated directly to the chosen accommodation.

Please note that the discount codes will not work online. To avail of the discount codes, bookings should be made via email or by telephone.

(Prices are indicative only; room availability and rates cannot be guaranteed for bookings made after 31st July; however some hotels may still offer preferential rates for Cohab3 participants; please confirm the best rate offered when booking)

There is a large number of Bed and Breakfasts and Guesthouses in Galway. For this option, we recommend looking for rooms in premises on College Road, Father Griffin Road, Father Griffin Place, or Whitestrans Road, or near Newtownsmith, Abbeygate Street, Lough Atalia Road, or Eyre Square.

Please note that the rules on short-term property rentals such as AirBnB are quite strict in Ireland; short-term rental premises must by law be registered and licenced with the local authority or the Irish tourism authority. This means that AirBnB is often not much cheaper than booking a regular bed and breakfast or guesthouse stay. We advise participants to look at several options before finalising their bookings.

3 How to get to Galway

As an island with numerous ports of arrival around the coastline, there are many ways to travel to Ireland and on to Galway. The most efficient and easiest is usually to fly to Dublin and then take a bus or coach to Galway.

Travel to Ireland by air

The main airport for travel to Ireland is Dublin Airport on the east coast, approximately 215 km from Galway City. Most major airlines connect with Dublin Airport. Details of the airlines flying to Dublin are available here: <https://www.dublinairport.com/flight-information/airlines>. Dublin is our recommended airport for travel to Galway for the conference, but you may prefer to explore other options.

Shannon Airport is approximately 95 km to the south of Galway in County Clare. Shannon serves several European cities but has a more limited schedule than Dublin. Details of airlines and destinations to and from Shannon can be found here: <https://www.shannonairport.ie/destinations>

Ireland West / Knock Airport is located approximately 90 km to the north of Galway in County Mayo. It is a small regional airport serving 21 European cities, including nine UK airports, and is mainly served by Aer Lingus and Ryanair. Details can be found here: <https://www.irelandwestairport.com/flight-information/destinations>

Two other accessible airports are Belfast International and Cork Airport. Travelling from either location to Galway involves longer journeys; however it is often possible to get cheap flights to these airports, and the scenery on a bus journey to Galway can be quite beautiful, particularly from Cork. Cork Airport is 225 km to the south of Galway City. Another small regional airport, Cork serves around 46 European locations, details of which are found here: <https://www.corkairport.com/destinations/direct-from-cork-airport>. Belfast International Airport is 215 km to the northeast of Galway in Northern Ireland (UK). Serving around 65 destinations across Europe, it is good option if you want to explore the cosmopolitan heart of Northern Ireland and its rich history and cultural heritage. Details of flights to and from Belfast can be found here: <https://www.belfastairport.com/flights>

From the airports to Galway by Bus

Whichever airport you land at, the easiest option for public transport to Galway City is by bus. There are no metro lines or train stations close to the airports which serve Galway City. Unless you are planning to tour parts of Ireland on your way to or from Galway, we strongly advise taking direct bus routes, since adding a bus change on your route can also add several hours to your journey.

We also advise that when booking a bus online you select Galway Bus Station (also called Galway Ceannt Station or Galway Central Station), Galway Coach Station, or Galway City as your final destination (buses to “Galway ATU” or “Galway University” will require an additional bus or taxi journey). This will ensure you arrive just a short distance from the main conference venue and close to all of the main hotels in the city.

The table below includes links to the main bus companies serving Galway from each airport and gives you an indication of average travel times. Alternatively, you can use the journey planner on the Transport for Ireland website at: <https://www.transportforireland.ie/plan-a-journey>. Note that there are no direct buses between Belfast Airport and Galway, so journeys from Belfast can take up to 5 hours if two or more transfers are required.

Point of arrival	Approximate duration by bus to Galway
Dublin Airport	2 hrs 15mins - 2hrs 30 mins
Shannon Airport	1 hr - 1hr 30 mins
Knock (Ireland West) Airport	1 hr - 1hr 30 mins
Cork Airport	2 hr 45 mins - 3hr 30 mins
Belfast International Airport	3 to 5 hrs

Getting to Galway by train

Unfortunately, there are no train stations at any of Ireland’s airports, so taking a train to Galway is only practical if you are planning to visit other areas of Ireland with a good rail service to Galway.

From Cork or Dublin city, the service is usually efficient and comfortable, and takes approximately 2.5 hours from Dublin Heuston Station (direct) and 4.5 to 5.5 hours from Cork Kent Station (a train change is required en route). Trains from Belfast require first going to Dublin, and journeys can take in excess of 6 hours. You can plan your train journey here: <https://www.irishrail.ie/en-ie>

To get into Cork or Dublin city from their respective airports, you can take a coach or a taxi. If you are planning to explore either city or their surroundings, please contact the conference organisers in advance and we will be happy to advise on the best places to arrive, visit, eat and stay.

Travelling by car

If you are planning to drive to Galway from anywhere in Ireland, many of the popular online mapping services will usually show you the best route. However, we recommend that you contact us (cohab3@cohabinitiative.org) for suggestions on best routes, rest stops, places of interest etc. Car hire costs from the airports are comparable to those in most of western Europe. Car journey times to Galway from the airports are about the same as travel times by bus.

Local transport

Most of Ireland's major cities and towns have good public bus services. In Dublin, local bus services are provided by Dublin Bus. In Galway, local services are overseen by Transport for Ireland. Click the links to access local timetables.

Taxi services in Ireland are well regulated and can be ordered using any of numerous booking apps. One of the most popular apps is FreeNow, which is also in use in many European cities.

Please note that ride-hailing apps such as Uber are highly regulated and all drivers using these apps must drive regular, licenced taxis and must charge the same rates. Therefore, these services are not any cheaper than other taxi services.

4 Welcome reception – Monday 14th September

Location: Veranda Lounge, Galmont Hotel, Lough Atalia Road, Galway, H91 CYN3

Our welcome reception will take place at the main conference venue, on the terrace overlooking Lough Atalia, which is part of the Galway Bay Complex Special Area of Conservation and Special Protection Area (protected under European Union law). We will offer some local food and drinks and listen to traditional Irish music.

5 Practical information

Safety

Galway is, in general, one of the safest urban areas in Ireland for tourists. It is also difficult to get lost, as long as you stay on the main streets – most roads will lead you to the docks, the main urban park at Eyre Square, or to the main shopping area. However, it can still be a busy, crowded city during the summer months so all sensible precautions should be taken, particularly against pick pockets – don't leave anything valuable exposed or accessible unless you are willing to lose it. Otherwise, keep to busy streets and formal paths, avoid poorly lit lanes, and feel free to ask the conference organisers if you have any questions or concerns.

In emergencies, the local number to call is 999, or 112.

Climate

The end of summer in Galway is generally mild (17° – 21° C) and usually quite dry, though as a golden rule any visitor to Ireland should be prepared to experience wind, rain, heat or cold no matter what time of year you visit ("four seasons in one day" is not an uncommon experience!). The changing climate makes long-range forecasting very difficult, so the local organising team will inform all participants of the likely weather scenario in the weeks before the conference.

We recommend dressing for mild dry weather, but bring a light raincoat and a warm sweater, just in case.

Power

Plugs in Ireland are three-pronged (the same as in the UK) and the electricity supply is 230v/50hz. Cohab will have spare adaptors on hand if you are stuck.

6 Sustainable Event Management

The Cohab Initiative Secretariat is in the process of implementing a Sustainable Event Management System in accordance with international standard ISO 20121:2024.

The Cohab3 conference comprises part of our pre-audit testing for certification, and as such we would greatly appreciate your assistance in helping us to make Cohab3 as sustainable as possible. Our sustainability measures in place in Galway include:

- Running a largely paper-less event
- Prioritising sustainably sourced, locally-produced food and drinks, with vegetarian and vegan options
- Serving tap water instead of bottled water
- Avoiding single-use tableware and cutlery
- Choosing a venue which affords easy on-foot access from a majority of accommodation options
- Working with a venue with a strong sustainability ethos and an environmental management system
- Working with transport companies with environmental management systems in place
- Segregating waste for recycling and composting

We would greatly appreciate your support for our efforts to ensure that the event has a minimal environmental impact.

Please note: Due to circumstances beyond the control of the conference organising committee, the field excursions intended for the afternoon of Wednesday 16th September can no longer proceed as planned. We regret any disappointment this may cause. However, in place of the field trips we will provide additional opportunities for networking and side events. For individuals or groups who nevertheless would like to make their own plans to explore parts of the West of Ireland that day, we will be able to provide recommendations and assist with the arrangements.
